The conference was organized by the Association of Clinical Psychologists of the Czech Republic and the Department of Psychology, Faculty of Arts, Palacký University. A dedicated website was created for the conference (<https://psychein.akpcr.cz/>). Participants could learn about the European project of training psychologists and psychotherapists in providing psychological early intervention (Psych.E.In.). Experts from Italy, Greece, Poland, Slovakia and the Czech Republic introduced the participants to the background of the project and the application of some approaches in practice. In the morning they presented the outputs of the Psych.E.In. project and provided information about the reasons, research and models behind the project. The afternoon lectures were devoted to the description of the approach and presentation of case studies from the perspective of different therapeutic schools in relation to crisis and trauma management. Of the 105 participants who registered, 55 arrived on site, with another 33 joining online. Most of the on site participants were psychology students from Palacký University, but there were also psychologists from private practices, school psychologists and psychologists from the defence forces and customs administration, psychiatrists. The on-line participants were psychologists in the healthcare sector. The lectures were recorded and their content was made available to participants and the general public online.
